

Bursary for the Leo Baeck Institute MA in European Jewish History

The Leo Baeck Institute in conjunction with the School of History, Queen Mary, University of London is offering two bursaries tenable for the academic year 2016/2017 for students taking the Leo Baeck Institute MA in European Jewish History. The bursary of £4,000 will cover a significant part of the fee at the Home/EU rate (the rate for 2016/2017 is £7,950) as well as the overseas rate (the rate for 2016/2017 is £14,400). Candidates should normally have attained or expect to attain a first class degree or equivalent in history or a related humanities subject.

The Programme

The Leo Baeck Institute MA trains scholars towards undertaking independent research on Jewish history, culture and thought in Europe. It provides a strong grounding in approaches and theories which have influenced the ways in which scholars understand Jewish history. Simultaneously, the MA introduces students to a wide range of sources available for European Jewish studies. Particular attention will be paid to the Jewish response to modernity and problems around the issues of assimilation, acculturation and identity. The role of anti-Semitism and the origins of the Holocaust are central, as is Jewish intellectual history, focusing on the ideas of eminent Jewish thinkers regarding the place of Jews and Judaism in pre-modern and modern society.

The MA consists of the core module, three modules chosen from a series of options and an individually supervised dissertation. Students will also take a non-assessed research methods course. Part-time students take the core module and one option in the first year, and two options and dissertation in the second year.

The Modules in 2016-17 are as follows:

- Modern Jewish History and Culture
- Antisemitism and the Holocaust
- Jews, Power and Intellectual History

The Leo Baeck Institute

The Leo Baeck Institute (LBI) is the leading research institute in the field of the history and culture of German-speaking Jewry in Europe from the 17th Century onwards. It was founded in 1955 and named after Leo Baeck, the last public representative of the Jewish Community in Nazi Germany. Among the Institute's publications are the Leo Baeck Institute Year Book and the Schriftenreihe wissenschaftlicher Abhandlungen. The Institute organises a broad range of events such as lecture series and international conferences, and has recently established two research professorships to investigate the role of German-speaking Jews in 19th and 20th century academia.

For more information, including how to apply, please go to the funding page of the School of History's website.

The School of History at Queen Mary

The School of History at Queen Mary is one of the largest history departments in London and offers a very wide range of degree courses and research opportunities. It provides first-rate teaching fuelled by cutting-edge research within a friendly, welcoming atmosphere with an emphasis on student support.

In the Research Excellence Framework of 2014 – the national assessment of research performance – the School of History at Queen Mary was ranked 11th by research power among all history departments in the UK. The School's success in REF 2014 means that it continues to be a centre of excellence in historical research and in dynamic and exciting research-led teaching for its undergraduates and postgraduates.
